

TO INDICT GOODE TO-DAY

Examination Waived by the Negro in the Police Court.

CHIEF OUTWITS GREAT CROWD

Had the Criminal Brought to
His Office Early—Man in Bad Condition.

Just five minutes of Justice Crutchfield's time was taken up by the James Goode case yesterday morning. Through counsel, the accused man waived examination in the two charges of murder, and he was sent on to the grand jury. This jury will meet to-day, when the indictments will be drawn and the charges acted upon.

In anticipation of hearing the evidence, and with a morbid desire to see the prisoner, hundreds of people crowded in and around the Police Court room, and through the corridors of the City Hall. Very few of them got even a glimpse of Goode.

WISE PRECAUTION.
In order to avert any possible display of violence, Chief Hulse had the man brought up from the city jail about 6 o'clock, and he was safely guarded in the chief's office until about 11 o'clock, when his case was called in the Police Court.

Then, with a strong guard of policemen, headed by the chief, Captain Whelan, and Deputy Sheriff, and other officers, the man was escorted to the courtroom. The chief's office to the courtroom was begun. All along the corridors, the crowd had gathered thick and dense. Officer Walter Schell and Officer Robbins cleared the way, and about two minutes the man, handcuffed, was seated in the dock before the court.

Commonwealth's Attorney Richardson was on hand. He asked the prisoner if he had counsel, and was informed that he had not. Then he suggested to the court that Mr. E. M. Roscher be appointed for the preliminary hearing to represent Goode. Such action was taken, and when the negro was arraigned, Mr. Roscher waived examination in each case. That was all. The crowd stretched its neck to catch a passing glimpse of the negro. He was not as bright as upon the day he was captured. He may secure counsel, as he has indicated a desire to communicate with his people in North Carolina, but that end in view.

INDICT HIM TO-DAY.
The grand jury will return the indictments to-day, and the Commonwealth's attorney will endeavor to have the cases placed first on the Hustings Court docket, so as to dispose of them at the earliest day.

The negro looked weary and hopeless. His eyes were not as bright as upon the day he was captured. He may secure counsel, as he has indicated a desire to communicate with his people in North Carolina, but that end in view.

The July grand jury embraces the following names:

J. B. Mosby, Thomas M. Rutherford, Charles P. Lathrop, Frank Jacob, T. Sedon Bruce, James T. Gray, Luke Harvey, James B. Phillips, G. W. Taylor, John A. Curtis, W. T. Hancock and W. B. Lyons (colored).

ANOTHER LINK BROKEN.

Death of Caleb Stallings, One of Remaining Old-Time Negroes.

In the death of Caleb Stallings, a faithful old negro who belonged to the family of W. S. Forbes, another link which binds our people to the faithful old servants of former days has passed. It is hard for the young white people of the present generation to realize how strong was the love of the negro for his white folks, and how thoroughly that affection was reciprocated by the people of both young and old, who owned them, and considered them members of the immediate family. Caleb belonged to a class who always wanted to know how much he could do for the comfort and pleasure of his white people, and he did not consult his own convenience when performing his duties. Any hour of the day or night he was ready to respond to the call of his master. He considered no work too arduous if his services were needed. In these days, when the negro tries to know how little he can do and how much pay he can possibly squeeze out of his employer for it, it is refreshing to recall the industrious and never-tiring servants of the past, who did their work for love and not for pay. The younger negroes of perfect blood are able to do nothing and yet live and get along some way or another.

When the war closed in 1865 Caleb went to his mistress, Mrs. Boyd, the mother of W. S. Forbes, who was then living in Charlotte, N. C., and asked if it was true that the slaves were all free. She told him that it was, and that she had no claim upon his time or services, but Caleb would not have it that way. With an humble and thankful heart, he reminded her of the confidence which she had in him as a slave, and of her goodness to him all his life, and told her that as long as he lived he would be to her the same humble, loyal and loving servant that he had always been, and up to the time of her death, which occurred in February, 1866, he never stirred for a day from her bedside. He died on the 2nd of June, 1904, at his residence, which occurred last night at the residence of W. S. Forbes, near Bon Air, he

BIG VENTURE IN VIRGINIA

Johnstown, Pa., People to Develop Rich Ore Beds in This State.

FAST DEPOSITS OF HEMATITE

Eight Thousand Acres, Covered With Valuable Timber and Underlaid with Raw Iron.

In the course of a few months a party of Johnstown people will be operating what those who have investigated it consider one of the most valuable deposits of hematite ore that has remained undeveloped in this country. It consists of almost 8,000 acres, located in the State of Virginia, near the famous Natural Bridge, and its quantity and quality have been passed upon by John Fulton, the eminent engineer and geologist of this city, himself identified with the new company, whose thorough investigations have led him to consider it one of the notable finds of the day.

The deal for this property, which has been for some time under way, has been closed within the past day or so, and J. A. Grazer, of the Cambria Land & Improvement Company, who conducted the negotiations, returned home from the field only last evening with the information of the accomplishment of his task. Associated with him in the enterprise so far are F. W. Otto, Attorney Bruce Campbell, Daniel Crofford, City-Solicitor C. C. Greer, J. Meyers, F. C. Hoerle and others. A temporary organization has been effected under the name of the Buena Vista Mining Company, the land Grazer is president of the organization. Mr. Campbell secretary and Daniel Crofford treasurer. Later a permanent organization will be effected either under the laws of Virginia or Pennsylvania, and probably with the name above given.

The land is easily accessible from two railroads, while together will likely be built right through it. The Norfolk and Western and the Chesapeake and Ohio run within three-fourths of a mile of the scene of the proposed operations, while a road from Buena Vista to a point in Amherst county, in length forty miles, is projected, and the project has been made to the new owners of the land for the proposed right of way. Six miles of this road would be through the property. The main feature of the new operations will, of course, be the ore deposit. This is, in the view of Mr. Fulton, almost limitless, and most of it can be obtained by the stripping process, whereby the surface covering of the ore vein is itself sixty per cent. ore, while beneath the deposit is higher grade. The stripping process will be built, washeries constructed to separate the ore from the clay, and other improvements made. There is no question of a good market for the ore, as Mr. Grazer, before leaving, contracted on the spot for a delivery of 600 tons per day.

HEAVY RAILWAY TRAVEL.

The Holiday and Summer Resort Business Unprecedented.

The railways of Virginia, and notably those of this city, did a heavy passenger business Monday, excursions being run to various points, and reduced rates being offered for the holiday to all resorts. "I never remember having worked as hard as I worked on Saturday, Sunday and Monday," said Mr. John E. Wagner, passenger agent of the Norfolk and Western Railway. "The movement of people to Virginia Beach and other seashore resorts, and the travel, the Fourth of July travel and the summer resort business to the various points in the mountains and on the seashore, has been a heavy one. The Chesapeake and Ohio hauled about eleven hundred people from this city to the various seashore points Monday."
